Here on the shore of the Pacific ocean, bordering on the Rocky Mountains, in an area earlier discovered by the English captain (George Vancouver) & others, having grown on account of gold-fever,
(now) famous on account of its universities,
with a name originating from Holland (Van Coevorden >> Vancouver), this (city of) Vancouver is forever beautiful...

Journal of South Asian Intellectual History

Scope

The Journal of South Asian Intellectual History (SAIH) is dedicated to the study of the history of ideas in pre-modern and early modern South Asia. The main concern of the publication is to advance philological and historical research into the rich intellectual history of South Asia in fields such as (but not limited to) philosophy, logic, astronomy, medicine, mathematics, literature, philosophical theology, and mystical traditions. Sources of such investigations may be produced in any of the languages of South Asia, including, for example, Sanskrit, Urdu, Persian, Gujarati, Malayalam, Kannada, and Arabic. Given the nature of intellectual interactions in pre-modern and early modern South Asia, the Journal also welcomes articles, written in English, working across various disciplinary boundaries and languages.
